

Front Face

Back Face

Detailed amulet information

Name: Jatukam Suwanaphom 50

Mold year: 2007 (Thai year 2550)

Blessed Temple : Wat Mahathat
Nakorn Sri Tamarat

Monk name:Achanpramut & Others

Quantity made: 599 pcs

Material: Porcelene

Original markings : Reverse

Swastika & Seephreng dot

Size: appx 7cm diameter

Face finish: Gloss Green

Thickness: 0.7mm

Amulet markings and meanings

A - Rahu, spiritual deva - represents good for luck , helps to avoid mishaps and unfortunate situations - always provide good vibes in anything the bearer does.

B - The main deva, Lord Jatukarm - Ramathep , which has always belived to be protector of the bearer with specific emphasis on Business, relationship and know also good for fortune in gambling.

C - Yants/Khats - ancient Thai / Buddhist sanskreet that is used on renown amulets which represents the many days of monks chanting and prayers.

D - The 12 Chinese Zodiac (animals) birth signs.This is aligned in the amulet to bring Luck and fortune to the bearer , as it normalised and emphasise on relationships with other birth signs.

E - Sacret Oil drop or marking done by the leding and master monk in the blessing ceremony. This is one of the most important stamp of this amulet, which makes it very rare.

F - The original casing for this amulets which states clearly the name of the temple /monastery it was made, blessed and issued.

G - Fine imbedded chips of stone which usually denote and captures the original temple building materials and is usually significantly ties the amulate to its origin, being part of it for eternity.

POINTS TO NOTE:

These amulets are always produced in limited quantities and will only be available in limited units. They are actually custom made in batches by various monastry and monks.The clay molds which are used to make these amulets are always destroyed after the limited qty are produced in a open ceremony.The value of these amulets , being collectors items, always appreciate in value. There are no 2 identical amulets.While we assure that our products are of original quality, we cannot assume responsibility for any unexplained variations which may appear from time to time.